I would like to know, if the observable is completed or emitted. function(input) { // it never completes, so ok. var e =... var o = new SomeObservable(); o.subscribe(e => console.log(e), e => console.log(e)); return o; } However, this scenario wouldn't happen if there is some data in the input. I want to make an API request which just completes when the requested data isn't present anymore. function(input) { // how can I know if data is absent? var e =... var o = new SomeObservable(); o.subscribe(e => console.log(e), e => console.log(e)); var data = getData(); o.subscribe(r => console.log('done'), () => console.log('error')); return o; } A: It's actually a bit of a mouthful to be honest. I think you just want to test if
